Dear Trustees of the Charity,

I am writing to let you know that I will soon be moving on from my Junior Research Fellowship in Music at Lincoln College, Oxford. I have been fortunate enough to secure a four-year research post at King's College London and have offered my formal resignation to the Senior Tutor at Lincoln, informing her that I will be leaving at the end of August. This new post will allow me to continue my work on street music in Paris while also joining an interdisciplinary team studying music in London 1800-1851.

I would like to take this opportunity to say how grateful I am for the support of Lord Crewe's Charity at this important early stage of my career. Needless to say, I would not have been in a position to apply for my next academic job were it not for the vital research time I have enjoyed over the past two and a bit years at Lincoln. I have thoroughly enjoyed my time as part of the College and have been hugely impressed with both the intellectual rigour and the informal camaraderie that characterise its distinctive sense of community.

I was pleased to be able to visit the Trustees in Durham last November – the interest and enthusiasm I encountered were most welcome. I know the College is keen to strengthen ties with the Cathedral, and I hope the Choir will be able to make a visit to sing in the Cathedral in the not too distant future. I will certainly remember my time as Lord Crewe JRF very fondly and will recognise your support in any published work resulting from my recent research.

Kind regards,

Dr Jonathan Hicks
